Now this ain't no story about Old Mac Donald or Little Bo Peep,
It's about a boy named Billy and the way he can leap!
Billy McMichaels lives here on the farm,
And he's the star of our little yarn...

Billy McMichaels lives on the Dancing Cow Dairy Farm in Northern Wisconsin. His sister Bonnie is an accomplished dance student. When Billy sees her recital he can't get the music out of his head or the movement out of his body. His interest is piqued and suddenly, he is seeing dance everywhere he goes, from the swans that fly overhead to the mice in the barn and the cats that chase them away. But what happens when his friends find out he likes ballet?

Join the Nancy Einhorn Milwaukee Ballet II Program at the as they perform the original Ballet-in-a-Box production, Billy's Dancing Dairy Farm. This interactive show will focus on the athleticism of ballet and the important role boys play in the art form of ballet. Ballet-in-a-Box turns a school gym, library or community center into a theatre, complete with special dance flooring, a sound system, costumes and all of the Milwaukee Ballet II dancers.

"I used to think ballet is for girls and it's boring and stuff. But now I see it in a different way." Jackson, 4th grade, The Prairie School

"Thank you for your inspiring performance. It was educational and uplifting (a tough combo); our boys – kindergarten through 4th grade – were 'busting moves' after seeing the show." Richard Threet, Principal, Perley Primary Fine Arts Academy, Indiana
